Sex Offender Is Placed On Probation

Two alleged sex offenders who were arraigned Wednesday before Police Magistrate Silvio E. Piacenti Chicago Heights, received widely varying treatment as a result of recommendations submitted by Assistant State's Attorney, H. J. Zadek.

Stanley Bobzin, 19 years old, of Frankfort, was freed upon payment of $25 of a $200 fine assessed for disorderly conducts. Originally he was booked on two charges of assault with intent to commit rape. Both of his intended victims are Chicago Heights housewives.

Piacenti said he disagreed with Zadek's recommendation that the more serious charges be dropped and a mere fine imposed, but in such cases the state's advice is the controlling factor.

Bobzin complained that the husband of one of the women complainants had threatened him. The husband in question then rose in court, and glaring at the defendant said: "Yes, and if you don't stay out of town I'll shoot you yet."

One of the conditions imposed on Bobzin was that he is to stay out of Chicago Heights for a year except for once a month, when he is to report to Police Chief Phil Howard. On his monthly visits, however, he must be accompanied by his father.

Both of the women complainants identified him as the youth who had followed them one night last month and accosted them with indecent proposals. In one case he lunged out at his intended victim, throwing her to the sidewalk before he was frightened away.

The second sex case defendant was Laverne Love, 27 years old, a farmer who resides west of Manteno. Accused of taking indecent liberties with two young girls, he was held to the grand jury under $2000 cash bond.

Love was represented by a battery of attorneys, among them W. W. Smith, noted Chicago criminal lawyer, and former City Judge Lee W. Carrier. Smith tried to persuade Zadek and the mothers of the young complainants to "dispose of the case here"—meaning on a minor charge and with a light penalty in the Bobzin case.

"Would you settle it here, if your daughter were involved?" one of the mothers asked.

Smith assured her that he would but his attempt to have the charges changed proved futile. He then agreed to an immediate bindover the father of Love putting up the bond.

Washington, D. C.

'FATHER' BARUCH

Gaunt, gray Bernie Baruch, whose relentless prodding of the war effort has saved more lives than anyone can estimate, is worried over a lot of things besides tanks, airplanes and machine guns. Among other things he is worried over the human problem of readjusting the lives of people who have flooded cities, who have been thrown out of joint by the war.

Sitting on his park bench in Lafayette park, where he holds "office" conferences, Bernie sees the stream of girls, thousands of them, from all over the U. S. A., dumped into government offices, into crowded boarding houses, and wonders what will happen to them when the war is over.

Baruch won't tell you—but his friends will—about how he handled this problem after the last war.

He had employed several thousand clerks and stenographers in his War Industries board, and after the Armistice he began to worry about whether these girls were going back to their homes or would remain in the exciting cities.

So he sent each girl a letter thanking her for the time and loyal work she had given her country. And as a hint that she should go back to her mother he suggested: "Anyone who will apply at my office can receive a railroad ticket back home."

Baruch also attached to each letter a $10 bill.

The railroad tickets were paid for out of his own pocket, since the government does not pay for personal transportation, and it cost Baruch many thousands of dollars. He was a little fearful that some of the girls might have taken the tickets, then turned them in to the railroad. However, he hoped that he might have helped to get at least a fair proportion out of the city and back home.

HCL

The high cost of living which the coal miners have complained about recently was substantiated by an OPA survey of company stores in western Pennsylvania.

John A. Fath, who made the survey, came back with a report of "exorbitant prices and mark-ups" and insisted that company stores, which do no advertising or sales promotion, should sell their goods at lower prices than other stores, rather than higher.

He found suits selling for $38.50 which cost the store $12.50. He found a shoe box marked $9.95, but inside the box he found the shoes themselves marked with crayon, "$6.50."

Result of the survey already has been a voluntary price roll-back in the company stores. Now that the government has taken over the mines, the OPA is moving to make this company store price roll-back not voluntary, but universal.

Note—Fath was once a storekeeper himself in Millville, N. J., hometown of Leon Henderson. He gave Henderson his first job.

HONORS FOR WORKMEN

The Office of War Information is arranging a de luxe program for next Labor day, hailing the contribution of American workmen in the drive for victory. "Producing for Attack" will be the theme of the program, and it will include inspirational broadcasts by President Roosevelt and other top-ranking war leaders.

However, this isn't the only labor show on the OWI schedule this year. Another special celebration for Labor, to be known as "On to Victory" day also will be observed within the next two months.

It was conceived by Maj. Paul Hines, chief of the labor branch of the Fourth Service command at Atlanta, Ga., and promoted by Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse."

All war plants will be asked to declare an "hour off" on "On to Victory" day, at which time special "War Merit" emblems will be awarded.

Climaxing the "On to Victory" programs will be a nation-wide broadcast in the evening—according to OWI plans—featuring such speakers as President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Generals MacArthur, Eisenhower and Doolittle and Admirals King and Halsey. Joseph Stalin and General Chiang Kai-shek of China also may be invited to take part. All the speakers will have a special message for American labor.

The evening broadcast will conclude with the sounding of taps from the steps of the nation's Capitol, in memory of our war dead, and an answering taps by U. S. buglers in Europe and the South Pacific.

Possible Nazi Triangular Defense Line

Italy's exit from the war, military experts believe, would force Germany to abandon Greece, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Bulgaria, thus losing 600,000 satellite troops and necessitating a 6,000-mile defense line with about 5,500,000 men. The line may run triangularly from Narvik, Norway, to Bordeaux, France, to Odessa in the Ukraine, then back north to Narvik. Neutral Sweden and Switzerland fall inside the triangle but Sweden has announced that such movements must end August 20.

GOD GIVES LAWS FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 23:1-9; Galatians 3:23-28; 5:13-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

Our God is a God of order. To have order we must have law, hence God gave His people not only the fundamental law of humanity's moral sense of right and wrong, and the Ten Commandments which are the basis of all codes of law, but also those detailed regulations needed for the law's interpretation.

The law of God was not intended to establish a legalistic system of salvation by work, but, as revealed in the New Testament, it was to guide and bring us to Christ, in whom it finds its true fulfillment.

These are matters of fundamental importance and suggest the need of a careful study of our three Scripture portions.

I. The Law Established (Exod. 23:1-9).

At Sinai the Israelites were brought into the presence of God in a dramatic and solemn assembly to hear the words of God from the mountain. These were later written as the Ten Commandments on the tables of stone. Here they learned in a new way of the majesty, the righteousness, and the love of God.

The Ten Commandments are recognized as the foundation on which all legal codes, ancient and modern, are built. They cover man's relation to God and his relation to his fellow man. They are unsurpassed as a comprehensive and compact statement of the moral law.

The passage in Exodus 23 gives us some of the rules and regulations for daily life which are in a sense an interpretation of the law. This portion gives us an idea of the type of laws provided by God for His people and reveals "the moral flavor of the whole divine legislation."

The thing which impresses us as we read of the divine requirements of justice toward all, of love for one's enemies, of refraining from false witness, of refusing all bribery, is that God's standards are very high.

God's law is good, it is right, of divine quality and perfect purity. It has, however, an even higher purpose than providing direction for life. We learn of that as we hear

II. The Law Described (Gal. 3:23-28).

What was the purpose of the law? It was and is a servant of God to lead the needy sinner to Christ. The word "tutor" in verse 24 does not refer to one who teaches, but the servant who saw to it that the school boy, possibly a bit reluctant, arrived at his destination.

The law convicts of sin and makes it evident to the repentant one that he needs divine help if he is ever to meet its demands. The law really puts a man in prison (kept in ward, v. 23), and makes him look to Christ to set him free.

When one trusts Christ he comes into the place of a son. He enters upon a spiritual maturity which makes it no longer necessary to have a tutor directing and disciplining him. He has entered into a new relationship by faith, and is a child of God.

Does this mean that the law has been set aside or abrogated? Not at all. Jesus Himself said, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law... I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill" (Matt. 5:17). This is our third point.

III. The Law Fulfilled (Gal. 5:13, 14).

Paul had warned against the folly of legalism. In Christ men are free from a slavish bondage to the law. But men, desiring to substitute license for liberty, were using the grace of God as an excuse for self-indulgence and sin.

Christ has set aside all the ceremonial requirements of the law, for He became the perfect, once-for-all sacrifice for sin, which was infinitely superior to all the offerings of the Old Testament law. He thus fulfilled the type of the offerings.

The moral requirements of the law were gathered up in Him, and in Him we have only one law to fulfill, the law of love. Obedience to that law meets all the moral requirements of the Old Testament law.

Liberty to the Christian is not a freedom to do as he pleases, not "an occasion to the flesh" that it may live in selfishness and sin. We are free only to be bound by the blessed law of love.

The tablets of stone were (and still are) important. Their laws have never been set aside or withdrawn. But in Christ God has done what He spoke of through Jeremiah the prophet, He has put His law in the Christian's inner being, and has written it in his heart. (Jer. 31:33).

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

Scientists have found that rubber is the only substance that can be stretched tremendously and resume approximately its original form. Too much stretching, such as in under-inflated tires, causes "fatigue"—and deterioration.

The first manufacture of rubber footwear outside the United States took place in 1856 in Scotland.

If gasoline consumption is a gauge of tire wear, more miles are run in July and August than any other months. Of the gas used in 1941, 9.5% was consumed in August and 9.4% in July. February was the low month, with 6.4% of the year's total.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

DOAN'S PILLS

MY FRIEND FLICKA

by MARY OHARA

CHAPTER XIV

THE STORY SO FAR: Ten-year-old Ken McLaughlin, given an opportunity to choose any yearling on his family's Wyoming ranch, picks the filly of a "loco" mare named Rocket. His father, a retired army officer, is disappointed by Ken's choice and by his son's failure in school. But he is pleased at the change in Ken since he has had a colt of his own. When Flicka, the filly, is badly hurt trying to jump the corral fence, Ken takes the opportunity to care for her and to make friends with her. McLaughlin, however, is still convinced the filly is no good and refuses to have anything to do with what he considers Ken's bad bargain.

Now continue with the story.

The filly's physical condition was improving. She ran all over the Calf Pasture on three legs. She was up on the hillsides near the three pines in the early morning, broadside to the sun, getting what Nell said was her radium treatment; and the first thing when Ken woke in the morning, he looked out of his window and saw her there, standing in profile, motionless as a statue, her head hanging low and relaxed.

The achievement which Ken had been getting just a hint of, like the scent of something delicious but far away tickling the nostrils of a hound, was more than a hint now. It was a reality. A victory that filled his lungs and shone from his eyes and gave strength to his hands. Flicka was his. Flicka had recovered. Flicka loved him. There was only one more thing . . .

"Dad," he said at supper that night, "Flicka's my friend now. She likes me."

"I'm glad of that, son," said McLaughlin. "It's a fine thing to have a horse for a friend."

Ken's face was strained. "And her leg's better," he said. "It doesn't hurt her. So—"

"Well—what?"

"Well—we've got to find out, don't we?"

"Find out what?"

"If she's loco."

"Loco! Oh," McLaughlin grunted and frowned. "She's not loco."

"But you said we wouldn't know until we began her training."

"Have you had that in your head all this time? That little filly's got as nice a disposition as any horse I ever knew."

"But Dad, how do we know? She might be crazy—like Rocket—like she was herself up in the stables, if we tried to put a rope on her—and she's got to be halter-broke—"

McLaughlin looked at his small son with a quizzical grin on his face. "Oh, that's what you want, is it? Some help in breaking that wild woman!"

Kennie nodded. Rob's eyes sought Nell's and then he pushed back his chair, took out his pipe and looked out the window gravely.

"I think we might do that tomorrow," he said finally. "Yes, I think I'll have time. Right after breakfast."

When supper was over, Ken fled from the table and ran to take Flicka her oats. He told her all about it. He stood smoothing her mane, he begged her to be good. He assured her there was nothing to be afraid of in being halter-broke. He told her how he and Howard had halter-broke the colts; that the colts had liked it; they had all had fun together. He begged her—he begged her! Oh, Flicka—

He began to think of what would happen if she wasn't good. He thought of Rocket, and then the hole—and then he laid his face against Flicka's mane, and stopped talking to her, because he couldn't tell her about those things—she just wouldn't understand.

Nell came looking for him. She liked to pay a little visit every day to Flicka. They walked up through the pasture together. The air was sweet with the perfume of wild roses. In the sunset there were long horizontal bands of deep rose and golden pink with dark blue sky in between. There was a mass of mauve and violet cloud above. A sickle moon rode in the midst of the color with one star drawn close.

Nell seized Ken by the shoulder and whirled him around before he saw it. "There's a new moon in the sky, Ken—look at it over your left shoulder—and that's good luck."

Ken obediently looked. He didn't want to stop looking. If it was good luck—Oh, if it was good luck—

When Gus leaned in at the door next morning and said "What's today, Boss?" McLaughlin began to outline a full day's work.

He was planning the haying. They'd begin in mid-August. The grass was deep and ripe. They could cut early this year. The weather had been so fine that all the ranchers in the neighborhood were getting ready to cut. Along the road-sides the mowing machines were already laying swathes of fragrant hay flat. The air smelled different. It was said that when hay was cut in Wyoming, the perfume of it was on the wind for hundreds of miles.

The mowing machines with all their small, razor-sharp blades must be gone over, bolts tightened, worn parts replaced; harness mended; new prongs put in the rakes; some repairs made on the stackers.

Ken sat in an anguish of suspense while his father gave Gus directions that, surely, meant a full day's work.

"And Gus—" added McLaughlin, "right now, before we begin with all that, Ken is going to halter-break his filly—I want you and Tim on hand—"

Gus' eyes opened in astonishment. He glanced at Ken's scarlet, down-cast face. "Ja, Boss—Vere will ve do it?"

"In the Calf Pasture. Call Tim." McLaughlin rose from the table. "We'll do it right now, and get it over with."

Tim and Gus came down from the stable carrying lariats, halter, and a lead rope.

They stood in a group just inside the fence, and McLaughlin walked forward a short distance with Ken, and told him to call the filly.

Ken obeyed. Presently Flicka appeared coming around the shoulder of the hill. She trotted up to Ken.

McLaughlin undid the red bandana from Ken's neck, handed it to him and said, "Just sling that around her neck and tie it in a loose knot."

Puzzled by these strange directions, Ken obeyed, and Flicka returned what, apparently, she thought was a caress, nuzzling his neck with her nose.

"I'd call that halter-broke," said McLaughlin.

"And now take your belt off," said McLaughlin.

"Here," said Ken, in a complete fog.

"Slip it through the bandana," said his father.

When Ken had done that, the belt hung in a loop under Flicka's neck. McLaughlin waved his hand. "Now go down the path—put your arm through that loop."

Ken did so, while McLaughlin stepped backward, put his arm across his wife's shoulders, and pretended to lean his weight on her.

He was thoroughly enjoying himself.

Ken walked down the path and Flicka hopped by his side, close to him. When they reached the cotton-woods on the hill, McLaughlin called, "Now turn around and come back. Let go the loop. Just hold your hand in the air under her chin."

Ken obeyed. The leather belt, the bandana, hung loose on the filly's neck. Ken's hand was in the air under her chin. He led her by an invisible bridle, and the filly followed as close as she could.

"I'd call that halter-broke," said McLaughlin grinning as the boy reached him. Ken was stunned.

"But Dad—" he said, "but it's not a halter, Dad—"

"You take some convincing, young feller," said Rob. "But all right. Give us a halter, Gus." Gus stepped forward and gave him the halter.

"Now put it on her," said McLaughlin, handing it to Ken.

Ken almost shook. He held the halter in his hands and turned to Flicka but dared not take a step in her direction.

"How shall I put it on her?" he asked, thinking of the way he and Howard had to struggle with the first halter and the colts.

"Just the way I put the halter on Taggart," said his father.

Ken thought about that. His father walked up to Taggart holding the halter openly in his hands, and Taggart stood there and stuck her head in it.

He summoned all his courage, went to Flicka and held out the halter. Flicka, who loved his hands, and had never felt the touch of them except in gentleness and affection, came closer, and Ken slipped the halter over her head, and hooked it under her throat.

"Now lead her," said his father. Ken obeyed and went down the path twenty yards or so—an easy halt and turn—and back again, with Flicka following so close the lead rope was slack.

"But Dad," said Ken, completely dazed, "how did she get halter-broke?"

McLaughlin did not answer directly. "That's all, folks," he said, turning to the small audience. Gus and Tim were both grinning.

"That's the way we break horses on the Goose Bar Ranch. I wish Ross Buckley had been here to see that."

"But Dad," protested Ken, slipping the halter off of Flicka's head. She stood beside him, nosing at it, nipping at it with her lips.

"Figure it out," said McLaughlin boisterously as he walked away. "Come on, Gus, we'll get at those machines—"

That night, when Ken came back from taking Flicka her oats, he walked to the terrace where his parents were sitting and said, wagging his head, "More poultices, please—"

Nell, who was laughing, stopped as she heard Ken's words and turned to look at him. "What's the matter?"

"Her hock is swelled up again and she holds the leg up."

Both his parents sat so still and so gravely for a moment, that it made Ken anxious. "The poultices cured it before—they'll cure it again, won't they?"

Nell got up suddenly. "I'll go down to look at it, Ken—"

McLaughlin went too.

They looked at the wound which was swollen and obviously painful. Her right foreleg was swollen too, all the way from the knee up to the scar of the chest wound.

Ken was alarmed when his father pointed out to him the second infection. "Can we put poultices on that too?" he said anxiously.

Nell nodded. "Sure. It won't be an easy place to bandage, but we'll manage."

Next time McLaughlin went to town he brought back a bottle of serum and gave Flicka a hypodermic injection.

"What's it for, Dad?" asked Ken anxiously.

"For a generalized infection like this."

"Generalized infection?"

"Yes. She had just one infected place, on her leg. This chest wound was all healed up and never had been infected. Now it's infected. The infection came through her bloodstream from her leg. That's called a generalized infection."

McLaughlin spoke in a casual, matter-of-fact way, and Ken's anxiety was allayed.

"Will it get her well quick, Dad?" he asked.

"Hope so, son—sometimes it helps a lot—sometimes they seem to do as well without it."

"Where'd you get it?"

"I got it from Dr. Hicks."

The name of the vet always made Ken think of money—and it gave him a shock. That thing his father had said—You cost me money every time you turn around—

"How much did it cost, Dad?" They were walking back together.

"It cost ten dollars."

Ken stopped walking and McLaughlin strode on without him, heading for the tool house, near which Gus was working on one of the mowing machines.

Ten dollars! Ten dollars . . . when his father crabbled about every penny the boys spent . . . about a forkful of hay . . .

Ken ran after his father. McLaughlin was already arguing over the blades with Gus. "Dad," he began.

"Well?" McLaughlin's head was raised from the machine.

"I—I didn't know—what you said, you remember—"

"Well, out with it!" roared McLaughlin impatiently.

"That I cost you money every time I turn around. I didn't see how I could, but now, why, Dad! Ten dollars . . . thanks ever so much, Dad—"

"Ten dollars!" shouted his father with the twisted, sardonic grin on his mouth. "Why, for you, Ken, that's nothing. A mere wave of the hand. You're the boy that threw away three hundred dollars just looking out the window for an hour."

"Why—why—I never—three hundred dollars—"

"Go on away and let me work," roared his father, and bent his head again over the machine.

Ken found his mother. She was busy too, sorting the laundry, sitting on her heels on the floor picking over a big pile of shirts, blue-jeans, socks and linen.

Ken posed the problem. "How did I, Mother? I never did, did I?"

Nell laughed and wrote "six prs. bluejeans" on her list. "Yes, you did. You looked out the window for an hour when you should have been writing a composition. So you weren't promoted and you have to repeat the grade. And it costs about three hundred dollars for one year's schooling for you—"

"Three hundred dollars," breathed Ken with awe. "How can it?"

"Count it up, eight months' board at $25.00 a month. A hundred dollars for tuition and books. You wasted all that, you see. If you had written the composition, your father wouldn't have had to pay that over again for you."

Guns Jammed; Spines Chilled In Guinea Skies

Airplane Gunners Tell of Exciting Experiences Fighting Japs.

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA. —"The Zeros were attacking from above and below, but we held them off until my machine guns jammed and then . . ."

The mere thought of a jammed gun sends chills racing along spines of American gunners who ride Uncle Sam's heavy bombers into combat with the Japanese.

In a sun baked tent back of an advanced airfield somewhere in New Guinea a dozen enlisted men were talking, relating their most exciting experiences. Sergt. Henry Garcia of Fort Morgan, Colo., told what he did in just such a case.

Garcia, black-haired farm worker, found his solution in the skies above Lae last January. He was right waist gunner on a Flying Fortress. Before leaving his base, he applied at ordnance for a tommygun, just in case the plane was shot down in the jungle.

Ordnance had no tommygun to spare so Garcia settled for a Garand M1 automatic rifle and a half dozen clips of cartridges.

"I yanked the cartridges and substituted tracer bullets," Garcia related. "We were flying on the left of a three-ship formation when we were jumped by 15 Zeros."

His Guns Jammed.

"The Zeros were attacking from above and below but we held them off until my machine guns jammed and then when I reached for the handle to charge it the handle was missing. That Zero was only about 1,000 yards away and he noticed I wasn't firing from my side. He leveled off and started to come in at me."

"I picked up the rifle, kept the machine gun in my left hand to make him think I was using it and started firing with the rifle. When he saw the tracers again he took off. Was I relieved?"

Sergt. Robert E. Griebel, 25, of Riverton, Wyo., related a similar experience as the most exciting of his 34 missions. His Fortress was jumped by seven Zeros. Guns in the ball turret and right waist went out.

"A Zero at three o'clock (to the right at the same level as the Fortress) noticed the trouble and moved in," said Griebel. "He tried to rake the ship and as he made his pass he came within 50 yards of the ball turret in which I was sitting."

"I was the scariest I ever was, or ever hope to be. What did I do? I just followed him with my guns, although they were useless. Then we got out of there."

Sergt. Robert F. Watson, 22, of Roanoke, W. Va., as far as the Japs are concerned, is dead, killed in the flaming wreckage of his Fortress.

Shot Down, Japs Thought.

"Madame Tojo claimed our plane had been shot down in flames, and I can see why the Japs thought so," Watson explained. Private Minor C. Smith of Paris, Texas, nodded agreement because he was with Watson that day and nominated the flight as his top experience.

"It was over Gasmata, New Britain," Watson continued, "and on the first run we failed to drop our bombs. There wasn't any ack ack either. On the second run we dropped three bombs and all hell broke loose. We were only about 3,500 feet up when I saw a yellow burst of flames under the nose. The engineer said the bomb bay tank was on fire. Then an ack ack shell struck just behind the pilot and exploded."

"We dropped the burning bomb bay tank and that's why the Japs thought we were done for. We put out the fire and came on home."

Week-Long Blazes Raze

Big Forests in Chile

SANTIAGO.—Forest fires lasting a week ravaged the environment of Cherenquico, Chile, causing deaths and a vast amount of damage. The inhabitants of Temuco, experienced a heat that was suffocating and knew that a great conflagration was raging somewhere, but it was several days before they learned that great stretches of wooded country were being laid waste. Many have been rendered homeless in the burned area.

Seems That Sometimes a Man Can Be Too Polite!

IRVINGTON, N. J.—Somewhere in this area a thief in the making is kicking himself for being polite.

He stepped up to Mrs. Phoebe Warburton in front of her home here and, in a well-modulated, refined voice said: "Your pocketbook, please."

Mrs. Warburton, unimpressed, screamed and ran. The would-be thief disappeared.

Dead Steer Kicks Him

And Breaks Five Ribs

VACAVILLE, CALIF.—George Higson found that even a dead steer can be almost deadly. The animal had been slaughtered, and Higson had grabbed both hind legs to roll it over for skinning. The reflexes in the steer's muscles were so powerful he landed 10 feet away against a kettle. Five ribs were broken.

Justice Holmes Had Gold Added to His Sunset

Justice Holmes replied as follows to the tribute of the other members of the Supreme court upon his retirement:

"My dear brethren: You must let me call you so once more. You more than kind, your generous letter touches me to the bottom of my heart. The long and intimate association with men who so command my respect and admiration could not but fix my affection as well. For such little time as may be left for me I shall treasure it as adding gold to the sunset."

Word has been received that Sgt. Richard Mason has arrived in England. He landed the first part of August and says his camp and the countryside is very beautiful.

Dear Friends:

I'm sorry I haven't written sooner to thank you for the kit and Easter box and the Tinley Park Times which I receive weekly. I'm grateful to you for sending me these things even though I don't live in Tinley anymore. I am now out at Camp Kearny Mesa which is an Aviation Base where I am waiting to be shipped out to school, and I am taking a 6 months course in Aviation Mechanics. I was very lucky to receive. While waiting to be shipped we are on different details such as shoveling dirt which I received today. So I better turn in. Thanks again for everything.

Citizens Service Committee: Just a few lines to let you all know that I received a small but wonderful package yesterday and want to thank you all for it.

I was very fortunate about three weeks ago and was transferred here at Chantute Field to start school for a period of three months. It's really swell here and I enjoy it very much. In my two short visits at home I have seen many of my old friends and really enjoyed myself in Tinley Park. Well I guess I'll close as it is time to get ready to turn in for the day.

Pfc. Albert A. Manzke, 36742972, 4th TSS Brks. 153, Chanute Field, Ill.

Dear Friends: I would like to thank you very much for the necessary articles you have given me and I assure you they have come in very handy, but I have added one more article to them which is a wash board and now almost every evening you can find me bending over my wash board like an (Irish Wash woman.)

I have another debt of gratitude to pay because last week I received a Tinley Park Times and when all the boys here saw it they began wondering how really good our Citizens Comm. was and it really is swell. So far this Navy life is swell and although we won't have boot training, they have managed, I think, to instill in us the usual amount of aches and pains. We're rather lucky on one end of the deal however because we have only on hour a week of drill but on the other end we didn't fare so well because we are up to eleven and twelve every night getting our school work done. Well it's getting close to chow time and I can say that very few people would want to miss our chow line so I will close for now.

Sincerely yours

Bill Dunn, A. S.

Dear Friends:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am still alive. Also to let you know that I received the package you sent about three weeks ago. Thanks a million.

Well I guess I'll close hoping this finds everything OK in Tinley. Thanking you all again. I remain as always,

Your friend,

Oliver Barr, Camp San Luis Obispo, Cal.

FRANKFORT

Aug. 13, 1943

Dear Editor: Well I know its about time I was writing to you and thanking you for the News-Bulletin. Have been receiving it regular. I received July 30 paper tonight. Am sure glad to get the paper and read it thru 2 or three times. As you probably know I'm up here in Alaska and doing fine. The only thing that isn't so good is the furloughs. Been up here about 17 months course know there are others like me that can't get one. Probably just as well without one as I'd probably get hitched like the rest of the fellows are doing. Wish I could give you an idea what its like here and what's doing, but we got a censor and he's pretty particular. The eats here are good and have good shows and town close by. So I guess I have enough enjoyment. Well thanks again for the paper and hope to see you soon.

Yours truly,

LIVE STOCK REPORT

Moderate receipts of cattle and lambs are holding prices covering these classes on a higher basis than the corresponding period last year. The average cost of killing steers, at $15.25, is 10 percent above a year ago, while lambs, costing $14.50, are two percent better than a year earlier. Hog quotations, however, are down seven percent, with the average price of barrows and gilts at the week's outset at $13.50, record slaughter affecting rates.

The $17 steer quotation has passed from the market picture for the first time since February, practical peak being $16.50. Strong weights are realizing highest figures, long yearlings usually selling 25 to 50 cents under weightier offerings. Native grass cattle are increasing and are selling at a sharp discount from strictly dry fed kinds. Demand for stock steers is very narrow.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Soul" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 15.

The Golden Text was, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul" (Psalms 23: 1-3).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6: 4, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Soul or Spirit signifies Deity and nothing else. There is no finite soul nor spirit. Soul or Spirit means only one Mind, and cannot be rendered in the plural. . . . As used in Christian Science, Soul is properly the synonym of Spirit, or God; but out of Science, soul is identical with sense; with material sensation" (PP. 466, 482).

WHAT TO DO WITH FATS DURING RATIONING

FIRST—Save every drop from pan drippings, gravy skimmings, etc., to use again in your cooking. The government has asked for fats to make gunpowder—but it doesn't want them until you've got all the cooking good you can out of them, for various dishes you may want to make.

THEN—When all the cooking good is gone, don't throw your used fats away. They're desperately needed for gunpowder. Every little bit counts. Just one tablespoon will fire five machine gun bullets. Even with rationing, you can save that much every day. Keep it in a can. Rush each canful to your meat dealer.

FEARLESS

BUD—just a clean, wholesome, fearless American boy... and his dog... thinking about tomorrow's ball game, about battling in clean-up position, about what he'll do to that Bearcat's pitcher. He knows there's a war going on. Sure he does. His brother Bill told him about it... Bill, who's over there helping to win it... and when his country needs Bud, he too, will do his part fearlessly.

Young America! Fun-loving, hard-playing youngsters. There could be no America without them. Today, they're developing keen, alert minds and strong, active bodies; tomorrow, they'll be guiding the Nation's destiny. They'll be running America's railroads, bridging the gap between producer and consumer; between where you are and where you want to go.

When Bud and his generation take over, ROCK ISLAND LINES will be an even greater railroad than it is today. Our Program of Planned Progress assures that. For, despite shortages of man-power and materials; and although, with the other railroads, we are doing for Uncle Sam a most profoundly important job, we are constantly building for the future... for America... for that America which one day we want Bud and his pals to inherit.

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

CONGRESSIONAL VIEWS

by Congressman Chauncey W. Reed

Who will get second place in 1944 on the Democratic ticket? A great deal of gossip pervades the cloak-rooms about the person who will receive the Presidential blessing for the second place on his ticket in 1944. It will be recalled that in 1940 Mr. Roosevelt forced an unwilling Democratic Convention to name Henry A. Wallace as his running mate instead of the late Speaker Bankhead who was the real choice of the delegates. Speaker Bankhead, however, was from the solid south which is traditionally Democratic and it is said that the President felt that Wallace, being from the middle west would add political strength to the ticket. Wallace, however did not turn the trick, and the middle west including Iowa, Wallace's own state, was carried by the G. O. P. Now it is said that the President favors James F. Byrnes, War Mobilization Director and former Justice of the Supreme Court for the vice-Presidential nomination in 1944. From recent newspaper stories, it would seem quite certain that, come what may, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who has always been a power in Democratic politics, will not be found beating the drums for the re-nomination of the present Vice President.

Creaking noises in your radio may be due to defective tubes. Remove the tubes and have them tested by a serviceman.

Loose tubes may also be the cause of distorted reception. So be sure they are firmly in their sockets.

To remove a tube move it from side to side slightly and at the same time pull up on it.

When replacing a tube, the prongs must be lined up to fit the holes in the socket before being pushed into place.

Static is annoying, also injurious to a radio. That's why every outside aerial should have a lightning arrester.

Crackling noises may be caused by aerial or ground wires that are broken or rubbing against trees or metal.

Avoid future trouble in your console radio by placing it an inch or so from the wall.

Tubes, transformers and resistors heat up and may be ruined unless there is free circulation of air.

Remember, reckless handling may spoil reception and performance.

So use care in tuning and operating. Your radio is a delicately adjusted instrument. This is especially true of the push-button control on the radio.

No! no! don't touch or adjust automatic record changer on phonograph when in motion.

In general, don't play handy man with your radio if it doesn't work well. Take it to a radio service shop.

Electricity has gone to war—don't waste it!

There will be a meeting at the home of Miss Lydia Groth, Monday evening, August 21, at 8 o'clock of the members of the Mokena Ladies bowling group, to discuss plans for next seasons bowling.

Women's Service Club News
by Mrs. Leslie Clark

We have received "thank you" letters from the following boys for their birthday gifts, which made them very happy to be remembered by the folks at home: Pvt. F. B. Lauffer, A. C. Arthur Hurley and Cpl. Berle Needham.

Lt. Harold Rose has left for Camp Lee Virginia after spending a 10 day leave at home. Pvt. Robert Benson has been transferred to the Army Air Base at Alamogordo, New Mexico.

We would like to thank the Mokena Band Parents Ass'n for their generous contribution of $25 which has been added to our Christmas box fund. Between $400 and $500 will be needed, we have a little more than $100 on hand, so at this time we are asking all organizations and individuals of the community for their help and cooperation. Checks should be made payable to the Mokena Women's Service Club, and cash contributions may be given to Mrs. Margaret O'Brien at the post office.

We also would like to thank Mrs. Stokes Nebeker for her donation of $1 monthly for the duration which we think is a fine idea.

Mrs. George Bennett reports that plans for the card and bunco party are progressing satisfactorily and the tickets and war bond award books are ready for distribution. It is hoped that every member will make a special effort to make this party a success.

The following is a letter received by the family of Russell Bennett 1st Class.

Letter from Seaman 1st Russell Bennett.
Dear Folks: Have time to write a few words to let you know that I am just fine and dandy, or something like that, and raising all the devil that any one person is allowed.

We are permitted to give our approximate location now, so I can tell you that we are in the Mediterranean Sea. Not bad eh? You can get an idea what we are doing from the papers. We took part in a recent invasion started July 10th and had plenty of action. Got to fire at a few enemy planes. We know there is a war going on NOW, too bad more people back home can't get just a little idea of what its like. I've had enough.

How's everybody back home? Still clicking I hope we'll all be back there pretty quick, then we'll all start to live again.

Guess I'll close for now with loads of love. Russ.

Also a letter from Mrs. Stokes Nebeker which is as follows:
Milbrae, California, August 7, 1943.
Women's Service Club,

My Dear Friends:-

Congratulations on the fine work you are doing. I enjoy reading your column in the News-Bulletin. Although I cannot belong to your organization officially, still have a special interest in the boys who are fighting for us. I have seen a lot of them grow up and can hardly believe that they are scattered all over the world fighting and serving for our country.

I am enclosing a dollar which I will send you each month for the duration. It will help a little towards the wonderful work you are doing and maybe put a "Bee" in other bonnets to do the same.

We have had the pleasure of entertaining three of our home boys while living out here. Charles Mau drops in every few months whenever he gets to Port. Earl Schenck has spent several week ends with us. One Saturday Earl arrived and while we were eating dinner who should come but Eddy Tierney he had a forty-eight hour leave. The boys were sure glad to see each other and we had a good time listening to them. I would like to extend a special invitation thru your column in the Bulletin to all the boys that if they ever get near or stationed around San Francisco our home is open to them. I would be a pleasure to entertain them and I'll cook what ever they want to eat (if I can) that reminds me one morning I asked one of the boys what he'd like best for breakfast. Spaghetti, was the answer. He got it.

May the Lord be with and guide our Boys where ever they may be and the Lord help us all at home to keep up our spirits and do all we can for a speedy Victory. This is my daily prayer.

Sincerely, Minnie Nebeker

ORLAND SERVICEMEN'S NEWS

Mrs. H. Kruspe, Chairman. Word has been received that James Davidson, Earl Moore, Chas. Mullin Jr. and Donald Cleveland have received their latest packages and extend their thanks for them.
Camp Chaffee, Ark.

Aug. 8, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe: I want to thank you for the swell package of cookies, candy and jellies you sent, it was really "on the ball" as they say in the Army.

The weather down here has been very hot for the last two months. The temperature gets up to 110 degrees almost every day once in a while it clouds up and looks like rain but it never does. There is only one place to swim nearby and that's an old quarry and the water is warm, nothing like Romeo, I sure miss that these days.

Well thanks again for the swell package hope to see Orland soon.

As ever,
Cpl. Chas. Mullin

Hobbs, New Mexico

Aug. 13, 1943

Dear Mrs. Kruspe and Auy.

Again I wish to thank you for the thoughtful consideration your Auxiliary provides for we boys in service. Believe me we certainly do appreciate the gifts you send us and cigarettes are always a very welcome gift.

I suppose you folks have plenty of heat at home, but I'm sure it doesn't compare to that which we have here. Any temperature near a hundred is considered a cool day down here and that wind and sand add to the pleasure and enchantment of New Mexico. The natives here keep insisting that this is the only place to believe I'm still waiting for the day when I'll be able to set my foot back in good old Orland.

We're having an all day gas drill today and writing a letter with this gas mask on is a little more than I bargained for. I have to pull over the sides once in a while to let the perspiration drip on me. I guess we shouldn't complain though. Because a little preparation now may come in mighty handy later on.

I'll have to call it all for now work seems to be piling up, so until later I wish to thank you again for the cigarettes, I appreciate them very much.

As always,
Don Cleveland

THE desperate effort of Gundar Hagg to run a mile around four minutes flat brings up again the matter of how much the human system can handle.

Gundar Hagg

A good many years ago the late Captain Charley Paddock told me an interesting story along this line.

He had just run another 100 yards in 9 3/4 seconds, equaling the world's record at that time. But he was somewhat depressed when I saw him a few minutes after the race.

In reply to our congratulations Charley shook his head. "I had my biggest chance today," he said. "But found I couldn't use it."

It must be remembered that Paddock had strong, powerful legs, thigh and calf.

"As I passed the 50 yard spot," he explained, "I knew I was flying. I knew I was running faster than I had ever run before. As I came to some place around the 70 yard mark I felt I was moving at an even faster pace, and felt certain I was on my way to a nine second flat performance. I knew it was my best and biggest day."

"Then suddenly I felt the muscles and ligaments in my legs begin to quiver and expand, and got the idea that if I continued any longer at this pace I would face a big blowup or blowout, and might finish a cripple for life."

"Maybe I was wrong in this guess. Maybe I could have finished with my legs intact. I had to make my decision in a split second and I couldn't force myself to take the gamble."

"The price was too high. So, instinctively I slowed down and reduced my speed. At the finish the muscles in both legs were still quivering. In spite of this forced slowdown I still finished in 9 3/4 seconds. I'm not sure any pair of human legs can stand a 9 second flat pace."

Horses Burn Out, Too

"Horses are much like humans in this respect," a veteran trainer said, in discussing human and other animal limits.

"Take the case of Johnstown. Here was probably the fastest running horse that ever lived. He was clocked more than once in mile workouts around 1 minute 33 1/2 seconds, or 1:33 1/2. That's blinding speed. But the pace was more than his system could carry. He was through in the middle of his three-year career. He burnt himself out through some form of throat ailment."

"In the same way, super-speed was largely responsible for Count Fleet's summer trouble. He had had several things happen to him in racing, for which extra speed was largely responsible. It might be possible for a horse to run a mile in 1:33, but I doubt that his legs or anatomy could stand it."

A four-minute mile doesn't call for anything like the speed approaching a fast 100 yard spurt, but it means close to the limit in the way of time for a far longer period.

A quarter mile in a minute flat is still some 13 seconds over the record for that distance. But a four minute mile is close to a sprint, and that's a long way to go.

There is still considerable doubt that Anderson of Sweden was correctly timed in his 4:02 plus mile. He may have been, but the odds are not that way.

Hagg will still have to clip a trifle more than four seconds from his fastest time, and four seconds mean a good many yards.

It would take some pacing opponent good enough for 4:02 or better to give Hagg his four-minute chance. And there is no such other miller now in sight unless Anderson, another fast Swede, can do the job.

It's something like Warmerdam looking for those extra inches in the pole vault to lift his body 15 feet.

Harness Racing

"I see where Empire is opening up to harness racing," James Casey writes me. "I'd like to be there. I've never seen a running race yet that compared to our light harness races."

"Remember Dan Patch? He won a lot of races on the Grand Circuit, and all in straight heats. Remember he established the world's record for a mile in 1:58. He was eventually sold to Savage Stock farm for $150,000."

A Dream Come True

Back in what you might call "far away and long ago," "Babe" Ruth's big dream was to be a major league manager.

At last the burly one got his chance to handle a club from the bench, after waiting many years.

The "Babe" was the all-high mandarin of the Yankees and Indians against the U. S. Naval Preflight North Carolina-service team for Ed Barrow's all out war fund.

There should be more of these contests—many more.

THE Tam O'Shanter golf show of mid-July served as a reminder that the game, despite its moribund condition, is still being played in sections of the country.

Tournament golf has been almost forgotten. No major sport has been hit quite so hard—both from a standpoint of tournament play and membership participation.

The United States Golf association was one of the first sports organizations to chuck the whole thing right after Pearl Harbor. The governing powers decided to put their championships in moth balls for the duration.

No one knows whether the USGA could have made an important contribution to the game. But the organization could have made an attempt. The committee chairmen refused to do this.

GEORGE S. MAY

The Tam O'Shanter was privately promoted. George S. May, a Chicago business man, put up all the money for prizes—and it was no inconsiderable sum. Admissions were paid through the purchase of war stamps. The show cost George May a substantial chunk of money.

Long after the USGA had taken a powder, May did a big job in keeping tournament golf alive. The national organization lost prestige with professionals and amateurs alike when it cancelled its championships at a time when most major sports were doing their best to contribute whatever possible to the nation's morale.

The USGA will have a mammoth post-war reconstruction job on its hands.

The War and Racing

Col. Matt Winn took the farsighted view when he insisted that horse racing can do a whole lot more for the war program than it has to date.

Racing supplied approximately 3 million dollars in 1942. It is Colonel Winn's contention that the amount should be doubled in '43.

Racing is enjoying the biggest boom in history. Crowds, with pockets—and purses—bulging, are spending unprecedented amounts of money. The conservative element of the turf world is quite concerned about the matter. Quite a few individuals fear a reformer reaction. And their fears may be justified.

Before young Alfred Vanderbilt, former president of Belmont and Pimlico, was given the nod by Uncle Sam, he came up with a revolutionary suggestion. It was his suggestion that racing give everything above operating expenses and a small percentage, to some war fund. The plan, to put it mildly, was looked upon with utter dislike.

Colonel Winn has a suggestion that shouldn't be frowned upon by the most avaricious. The present racing policy calls for a war-day program at each track. On this particular day all the profits are channeled into the war kitty. Colonel Winn believes this should be doubled and that each track give two days' proceeds.

A large segment of the population continues to regard horse racing as a somewhat dubious enterprise, connected rather vaguely with pool halls, checkered vests and broken families. The industry should set an example without waiting for pressure from the outside. Other sports have done considerably more than racing in proportion to total receipts.

SPORTS SHORTS

Johnny Cooney played in the major leagues 18 years before hitting his first home run.

The youngest player in the American association is Joe Garagiola, 17, Columbus catcher.

Not long ago Dizzy Dean, who picked the Yankees and Cardinals for the 1942 World Series, predicted that the Cardinals and Browns would meet this year.

Max Macon, Dodger southpaw, says the fastest man he ever saw was Joe Vance, who once pitched for the Chicago White Sox.

New York state will receive 11 million dollars this year as its share of pari-mutuel betting, according to estimates.

Wrestler Jim Londos is growing avocados in California.

An entry in the All-American amateur tournament at Tam O'Shanter recently took a 17 on his second hole. His ball was in the water four times, hit a tree and bounced off a walk.

Old Buildings Can Be Weatherproofed

Asphalt Roofing Paper Will Seal Up Chinks

Protection against the weather is vital to the health and productivity of livestock. Poultry houses, hog houses and barns should be proof against infiltrations of rain or chilly drafts. As lumber is critical material the farmer must try to make present structures do for the duration. One way to do this is to lay asphalt roll roofing right over the old walls of weather-beaten farm buildings. This material is non-critical and easily applied if a few basic rules are followed. To get real service from the new wall covering, however, it must be properly applied.

The choice of nails is very important. Only rustproof nails should be used and these should always be driven in straight to prevent their tearing the roofing material. Special care should be taken not to drive them into cracks or knot holes when working over old sheathing, or they will work loose. Large head roofing nails are best for nailing laps.

Proper application of lap cement is another essential. It works best when lukewarm and should never be heated over a fire. If it dries out from standing, it can be thinned with naphtha. Tight cementing of all laps is necessary to the success of the finished job. Never spread the cement too thin or skimp any spots between laps.

Advance planning will go far to simplify the job. Cut the roofing sheets in two lengthwise, making each sheet 18 inches wide. Lay the sheets flat in piles to allow for proper stretch. No cutting should be done, however, until you have measured the wall areas carefully, and figured out just how much roofing paper you will need to cover them, allowing for lapping and trimming.

Apply the sheets vertically. Begin the nailing in one corner. Then straighten out the roofing sheet, stretch it horizontally and allow it to hang smooth. Nail from the top down on both sides, stretching the roofing as you go along. Nails should be alternated, one side and then the other, and the roofing should be allowed to hang free with no attempt to distort or shape it.

Care of the new sidewalls is a simple matter. If they are properly applied they will provide good weather protection for years to come. No painting is necessary when the roofing sheets are first put on, but to prolong their life indefinitely it is well to apply a coat of asphalt roof coating every few years.

Rubber From Wheat

Every American grain-producing farm is a potential "rubber plantation," says S. L. Fisher, a grain buyer for Schenley Distillers corporation. Butadiene, the principal ingredient in the synthetic rubber process, can be obtained as a by-product in the distillation of industrial alcohol from grain. In tests, wheat from one harvest has been converted into rubber tires which were used on tractors working on the following harvest.

Little Chap Won His Bet With Both Thumbs Down

Green, who was the local athletic champion, had been holding forth at great length. None of the club regulars could do anything about it. But presently one of the visitors looked up.

"I'll bet," he said cheerfully, "$10 that I can wheel something in a wheelbarrow from one street lamp to the next, and you can't wheel it back!"

Green looked him over—not a very hefty sort of fellow. Whatever the stranger could do he could better.

"Taken," he said.

A wheelbarrow was borrowed.

The stranger rubbed his hands, picked up the handles. "Get in, old man," he said.

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.
